

Leaving primary school

Leaving primary school and going to high school makes me feel happy and excited because the teachers in primary school are very stressed, annoying and strict.

When I first went to school in Korea they did more work than at the school I was in a few weeks ago. That is why I like going to school better over here than back there. In Korea, they do longer period of schooling and working but in here we get to start school at about 8:15am in the morning and finishes at 3:20pm or even earlier. Also the teachers back there are certainly more violent because they hit people on their hands if they don't behave.

Some of the teachers in Cranbrook, the school which I will be going next year, are certainly kinder in how they treat people. I also have a lot more friends there than here in primary school. That is why I prefer high school to my hellish primary school.
